

Being a member of the Decision Sciences Institute (DSI) has added tremendous value to my career over the years. The institute has offered me the opportunity to develop a strong network and connections with multiple scholars in the field. The annual conference is instrumental in providing an opportunity to reconnect with colleagues and co-authors in person. Additionally, the wide breadth of research topics and the high quality of presentations at the annual meeting enables me to keep up with the latest research topics and techniques. My best experiences at the conferences also include attending keynote addresses, panel sessions of editors from top journals, and topic-based panel discussions by leading scholars in the field on cutting edge research trends and trajectories for the future. These have been especially enlightening in helping me develop a long-term research agenda that can contribute to the field. Finally, I believe that DSI is an inclusive association that enables academics to develop lifelong connections throughout their careers and I look forward to my continued involvement with the institute.

Sachin B. Modi
Professor of Global Supply Chain Management
Wayne State University

