

2024 DSI Annual Pedagogy Conference
21st Century Teaching Effectiveness: Exploring the Spectrum
June 25-26, 2024
Virtual Conference

Call for Abstracts and Short Papers

The 1st Annual Pedagogy Conference of the Decision Sciences Institute (DSI) is themed and titled 21st Century Teaching Effectiveness: Exploring the Spectrum to capture the essence of evolving methods, tools, and delivery modes unique to the decision sciences disciplines.

We are excited to offer you two world renowned keynote speakers from industry to share their insights on current and future looking states of practice. Thoughtful panels exploring topics on trends in higher education and innovation, global educator experiences, and being an outstanding educator. Featured sessions for Data, Analytics and Statistics Instruction (DASI), and cutting-edge innovation labs.

Accepting pedagogical abstracts and short papers for peer-review January 15 – March 31, 2024.

It will be a great opportunity to once again see familiar faces and to meet DSI's many new members. We look forward to sharing thought-provoking conversations, making new connections, exploring exciting innovations, and in general, opening up to the future of the decision sciences education.

We encourage you to submit your pedagogical related work to be part of this event as we reunite as a DSI community. There are tracks for case studies, teaching activities and games, conceptual and pedagogical research, ethical and responsible use of AI and other tools in teaching and learning, teaching AI and other tech tools, curricular and program issues, diversity, equity & inclusion and student belonging, and other pedagogy related topics.

DSI is using a new conference management system, Oxford Abstracts, for this event. Please visit our conference website for submission instructions and more information. Ready to submit now?
